Selected Results

- As second-chair trial counsel, obtained defense verdict in 5-week products liability trial. Plaintiff claimed client defendant, Motorhome Step Company, negligently designed and manufactured an automated step system that was installed into plaintiff's recreational vehicle. On the night of the incident, plaintiff alleged she stepped out of the living quarters of her RV and defendant's automated step system had unexpectedly retracted causing her to fall.
- Represented a car rental company as second chair at trial defending high value personal injury auto accident claim. Reached a settlement early in trial favorable to the company.
- Obtained the dismissal, without leave to amend, of a federal class action lawsuit relating to the "Varsity Blues" college admissions scandal. The Court found the plaintiffs, rejected applicants to various prominent national universities, lacked standing to bring the lawsuit because they could not show either a particularized injury or that any such injury was caused by the alleged wrongful actions of defendants.
- After a personal injury plaintiff's verdict, Mr. Shepard successfully reduced plaintiff's claimed post-trial costs by nearly 90%. When plaintiff appealed the court's decision, Mr. Shepard successfully opposed the appeal, resulting in a complete affirmance of the trial court's ruling in a published opinion: Anthony v. Li (2020) 47 Cal.App.5th 816.
- Successfully demurred to wrongful death claim in a case where the client's former employee committed suicide four months after an alleged wrongful termination. Plaintiffs claimed the employer's wrongful termination of the decedent caused the suicide. Mr. Shepard successfully argued that the wrongful termination did not cause the suicide, and even if it could be shown that it did, the death was covered by the worker's compensation exclusive remedy.
